

June 11, 2009

To Whom It May Concern,

Look, let me tell you candidly what I think Bruce Piasecki and the AHC Group are doing. I believe they are out in tomorrow's weather sounding for the deep water and the rocky shoals, and reporting back to business, industry, corporations, organizations. If there is more valuable work than that in these uncertain times, I honestly don't know what it is.

We can't steer by the old lights, and ventures like AHC, people like Bruce, are engaged in a process of informed guidance, helping enterprise around history's sharp corners by putting language to current and impending conditions. Either the world is headed toward sustainable practices, or the world is drifting toward trouble and the ruin of all systems as we presently understand them. AHC is a sustainability champion. That has great value; that's real currency.

Sincerely,

Gene Miller
President
Center for Urban Innovation